Attorneys Patti Jane Lay and Heidi Wegryn will present an overview of the collaborative process as a means to resolve disputes in family law cases as well as other types of mediation cases. A relatively new dispute resolution process in Tennessee, collaborative cases are an increasingly popular approach to solving divorces using the team approach consisting of two collaboratively trained attorneys representing the parties and a coach, who is also a collaboratively trained neutral. Financial neutrals and child specialists who are also collaboratively trained can become part of the team if needed to resolve the case without going through the adversarial litigation process.
